

You will be in charge of establishing the project framework and definition, the operation and the associated milestones. You will be the integrator who brings together the company's stakeholders around the project for professional implementation.

1

Project management, including ensuring a high degree of knowledge sharing, motivation, collaboration and enthusiasm in the overall project group as well as with other stakeholders. Ongoing management reporting.

4

You must complete construction cases from start to finish within the agreed financial, quality and safety framework. Whether you are applying for the position as a project or construction manager, you must see a challenge in managing day-to-day management at a construction site, which includes planning, time management, and site planning coordination. You will also be in charge of contact with customers, advisors, and contractors.

7

As a project manager, you are responsible for the construction site from start to hand-over. This includes contract and budget matters, as well as overall scheduling, quality and safety and ongoing contact with the employer, consultants, and subcontractors.

8

As a project manager, you are the link between the business areas of the bank and IT. It is essential that, with your business understanding, you can quickly understand the wishes and needs of the business. You must be able to translate these into a requirements specification, which forms the basis for a development project for which you are responsible for the project management.

2

As a project manager, your primary area of work will consist of overseeing and being in charge of the internal phase of initiated research projects. You will become acquainted with many facets of market analysis, from discussion of methodology, calculation of prices and preparation of questionnaires to planning and follow-up of projects, preparation of table materials, and reporting to our consultants or external clients.

5

As a project manager, you are the one who has an overview of the project. You attend customer meetings, negotiate with the customer and prepare offers. You prepare contracts, estimates and delivery plans for the customer, prepare the

It is expected that you will be able to demonstrate good technical understanding and bridge the gap between decision-makers, system developers, and users, as well as:

- Translating the business's wishes/needs into requirements specification for the use of IT development
- Business partner sparring about opportunities in systems/solutions
- Ensure that the solution is developed by internal or external IT-partners
- Responsible for the solution being delivered on time and with quality, travel activity.

3

As you will be in charge of the entire project, you are responsible for the project being carried out within the agreed framework, in terms of time, quality, and finances. Your tasks will include:

- Contact with the customer, subcontractors, and internal task owners
- Contract design and contract negotiations
- Planning and managing the project
- Communicator of customer requirements and wishes
- The driving force in the project group
- Sparring partner on technical issues.

6

work breakdown structure, and you also follow up and ensure that the company lives up to the customer's expectations. It is also the task of the project manager to identify strategic initiatives and processes that are relevant to the customer.

9

FIGURE 4.2
Collage with excerpts from job postings.