

EXCERPTS FROM JOB ADS FOR PROJECT MANAGERS

You will be responsible for establishing the project's framework and definition, operations and the accompanying milestones. You will be the integrator who gathers the company's stakeholders around the project with the aim of performing it in a professional manner.

1

Project management, including the establishment of a high degree of knowledge sharing, motivation, cooperation, and enthusiasm in the project group as a whole, and with regard to other stakeholders. Ongoing reporting to the management.

4

You must carry out building projects from beginning to end within the framework of the agreed economic, quality, and safety requirements. Irrespective of whether you are applying for the job as project or contract manager, you must see a challenge in the day-to-day management of a building site, including planning, time control, and building site coordination. You will also be responsible for contacts with customers, consultants, and specialist contractors.

7

As project manager you are responsible for the building site from the beginning until handover. This includes matters concerning contracts and budgets and general time planning, quality, and safety, as well as ongoing contact with the client, consultants, and subcontractors.

8

As project manager you are the link between the bank's business areas and IT. It is important in this connection that you can use your business acumen to rapidly gain an understanding of the wishes and needs of the business. You must be able to translate these into a specification of requirements that will form the foundation for a development project that you will have managerial responsibility for.

2

As project manager, your primary areas of responsibility will be to maintain an overall view and take charge of the internal stage of analysis projects in progress. You will become familiar with many facets of market analysis, from discussing methods, calculating prices, and preparing questionnaires for planning and following up projects, to the preparation of tables and reporting to our consultants or external customers.

5

As project manager you are the person with an overall view of projects. You will take part in meetings with the customer, negotiate with the customer, and prepare bids. You will draw up contracts, estimates, and delivery plans for the customer, prepare a work breakdown

9

We expect you to demonstrate sound technical understanding and the ability to bridge the gap between decisionmakers, system developers, and users, and:

- Convert the wishes and needs of the business into a specification of requirements to apply to IT development
- Act as a sparring partner for the business regarding systems and solutions
- Ensure that solutions are developed by internal or external IT partners
- Take responsibility for ensuring that the product is handed over on time and is of the required quality, which demands a broad perspective, coordination, and monitoring and control.
- Ensure that the existing and planned system solutions at Norden Bank are used by and anchored in Bank Danmark
- Coordinate with your Scandinavian colleagues, which will include travelling.

3

As the person responsible for the entire project, you must ensure that the project is performed within the agreed framework with regard to time, quality, and economy. Your tasks will include:

- Contacts with the customer, suppliers, and internal project owners
- Drawing up contracts and negotiating in connection with contracts
- Planning and controlling the project
- Acting as a mediator of the customer's requirements and wishes
- Acting as the motive force in the project group
- Acting as a sparring partner in connection with technical issues.

6

structure, and you will also be monitoring and controlling to ensure that the company lives up to the customer's expectations. It is also the project manager's task to identify the strategic initiatives and processes that are relevant for the customer.